Urban Angel

Natalie Walker

Snow falls on New York
And the lights all go out
All the music suddenly stops
Now there isn't a single sound

We are no longer rushing around We stop to smell the air Take a breath and close our eyes For a moment if we dare

She pulls us in
And wraps us in her chill
She holds us close
And now we can be still

We're okay here
We'll stay here
For a little longer
We embrace this common ground

All a little lost Somehow it fits She holds part of all of us Forever and content

No matter how many times I leave
I always hear her voice calling me
I could be a million miles away
But its here, I'll always have a place