

Carry You

Newton Faulkner

When you find me far from home
And the thunder inside you shakes your bones
You must believe the one thing you should know
I carry you wherever I go

If you get tired of eating alone
To get to you I'd run through rain and storm
I'm sorry I can't always let you know
I carry you wherever I go

You don't need to remind me not to forget
When you think of me I'm thinking of you I bet
You must believe the one thing you should know
I carry you wherever I go, go
I go, go

When you find me far from home
And a thunder deep inside you shakes your bones
You must believe the one thing you should know
I carry you wherever I go

If you get tired of eating alone
To get to you I'd run through rain and storm
You must believe the one thing you should know
I carry you wherever I go

Whenever you're lonely, whenever you're sad
You know I'm not the only one who's got your back
Though the road may be cold and no matter how far
I'm always coming home to you

You don't need to remind me not to forget
When you think of me I'm thinking of you I bet
You must believe the one thing you should know
I carry you wherever I go
You must believe the one thing you should know
I carry you wherever I go

When I finally close my eyes
And my soul goes floating off into the sky
I'm sorry I won't always let you know
I carry you wherever I go
I carry you wherever I go
