Blind Lighthouse

Night Verses

Broken, I fall back to reach through.
My body's lacking design.
Haunted sentiment crawls beneath you.
My head is laced with a lie.
And my hand, they were a vessel for strengthening your heart.
A signal in the dead of night to call upon.
Now, the world has gone and melted.
Straight blistered by the sun.
There's no calm to ease the storm that we've become.
There's no light that never burns out.
I can't stand the thought of you holding onto nothing
When you've got everything left to lose.
We were young and troublesome.
We had no one.
Now, scream it...
Where's the love?
Choking for the words, internally under darkest traces of light
I've been hurting and it's hard for me to blame bitter context.
It's all out of line and I don't wanna know.
Yeah, we're losing the love and facing the end.
Yeah, we're losing the love.
It's starting to happen again.
Crashing, swaying, hurting, numb by your curse.
Sinking, surging, raging.
I will capsize the world.
