

I used to carry my own misery
Crushed by the weight as it tried to kill me
I thought that I could mend my broken heart
But nothing I did would stop the bleeding

It was not just another phase
There was something wrong with me

And it feels like the weight of the world
Has been taken away with the hurt
And you've shown me where I belong
So I'll follow you, follow you home
Time after time I'd lie awake at night
Wondering why he never came around
I felt the pressure as I started to drown
But you gave me breath and showed me the way out

Though the memories will never fade
All the pain seems far away

And it feels like the weight of the world
Has been taken away with the hurt
And you've shown me where I belong
So I'll follow you, follow you home

When the thoughts keep me up at night
When I feel so alone inside
When I'm lost with a fading light
I will follow you, follow you home
When I feel like I have no control
When I'm faced with what I'll never know
When the questions will not let me go
There is nothing wrong with me

And it feels like the weight of the world
Has been taken away with the hurt
And you've shown me where I belong
So I'll follow you, follow you home
