Family man

He's a family man, his wife laments
Never broken any of the Ten Commandments
Either pushing rock, selling for cock
Or rubbing out, rubbing out, rubbing them out

Seeing ass fly by in the drive by, fly by night He'll give you a fright taking out your cash He'll stuff it in his stash, leaving by the back door Settling up your old score

He's a family man, his wife laments
Never broken any of the Ten Commandments
Either pushing rock, selling for cock
Or rubbing out, rubbing out, rubbing them out

He knows it all so well From a spell in the cell Now can't you tell this is hell But just think of the cash And the friends you can smash

If they're crossing your path You'll get the last laugh As you're driving away Yes, it's been a good day To die as you try to get by

Buy to get high and he'll lend so that you spend Your life will depend on your money made friend Your friend till the end, he knows no wrong from right Best keep out of his sight

He's a family man, his wife laments
Never broken any of the Ten Commandments
Either pushing rock, selling for cock
Or rubbing out, rubbing out, rubbing them out

Yeah, and you know his girls love him too
Even when you're dropping your goo
And you think, "Well, if the judge only knew"
But then, do you really think that he hasn't been there too?

With his leather strap, clap trap
And a dolly bird sitting on his lap
Her fingertips trips across him like on a road map
Leading down to his old chap

Family man
Family man
Family man
Family man
Family man
Family man

He's a family man, his wife laments

Never broken any of the Ten Commandments Either pushing rock, selling for cock Or rubbing out, rubbing out, rubbing them out

Seeing ass fly by in the drive by, fly by night He'll give you a fright taking out your cash He'll stuff it in his stash, leaving by the back door Settling up your old score

Family man
Family man
Family man
Family man
Yeah, he's a family man
