

MEMORY FRACTURE

nothing,nowhere.

We fight, we fall, we fuck
I sleep until the sun
I burn the memories
Your stomach's never full
It's filled with chemicals
The sound, it ends the lull

Yeah, I hate to see you cry
The low, it kills the high
The years, they pass you by

I need some space
Feel like giving up and it's late
I felt down before, but I can't
See that memory in that space
Sing that reverie in that place, it's empty
All of the things that we promised, it's true
All of the nights that I promised to you
That I would change

And I felt it all
The sound, the sight, the light across your face
Lie down
Lie down
Wake up
Wake up

The pain and agony
The silent casualties
The brain anatomy (Fails you)

I need some space
Feel like giving up and it's late
I felt down before, but I can't
See that memory in that space
Sing that reverie in that place, it's empty
All of the things that we promised, it's true
All of the nights that I promised to you
That I would change

And I felt it all
The sound, the sight, the light across your face
Lie down
Lie down
Wake up
Wake up

All that's left behind is memories
The finite moments were temporary
A brief visit from serenity
A break from breaking down, flickering out
Somewhere between serenity and insanity
Somewhere between composure and catastrophe
I'll meet you where the pavement ends
Once again, it's all intangible
It's what I never had, it's what I never will
And all the silence, we watch it fracture

So let it fracture (So let it fracture, so let it fracture)
