Odette

You are what I once discovered
I once uncovered something I loved
Is it too self referential to reminisce
In what I dreamed of
You once held something to me
Ran something through me
Akin to a knife

And I was once where I should be
Now I am here, rebraiding my time
And if I'm just where you left me
How come the pavement is different now

There ain't no cracks in between
Where I once stepped
And where you were once found
Do you know what you're saying
Know how you're slicing into my heart
I think you're smarter than you let on
You only come out in the dark

You are what I once discovered
I once uncovered something I loved
Is it too self referential
To reminisce in what I dreamed of
You once held something to me
Ran something through me
Akin to a knife
And I was once where I should be
Now I'm here, I'm here and I'm fine

And if I mess up then show me
Tell me what it is, I beg you
I'm not smart enough to guess it
I need you to just address it
And if you know something tell me
I'm not smart enough to guess it
My eyes bugged too much to see it
Won't you outline what you're saying

And if you know something, say it
Am I good enough to know it?
Am I good enough to know it?
Am I good enough to know it?

Am I good enough to know it?
Am I good enough to know it?
Good enough to know it?
Am I good enough to know it?
