

Return

OK Go

Now its years since your body went flat and even memories of th at are all think and dull, all gravel and glass. But who needs the m
now -- displaced they're easily more safe --
the worst of it now: I can't remember your face.

Return.

For a while, with the vertigo cured, we were alive -- we were p ure.
The void took the shape of all that you were, but years take th eir toll,
and things get bent into shape...
Antiseptic and tired, I can't remember your face.

Return.

You were supposed to grow old. Reckless, unfrightened, and old,
you were supposed to grow old.

Return. You were supposed to return.
