

Fire Alarm

Olive Klug

Last night I dreamt of kissing you
It was soft and sweet and warm, but it was desperate too
You say it isn't fair, fingers tangled in my hair
Stop asking me to measure how much I care

Oh, why do we trade our love for freedom
Oh, why do we trade our freedom for safe paradigm
Why do we come together, just to fall apart
Out tired arguments become works of art
I should have listened when they warned us
By setting off the fire alarm

So let me have my idealized loneliness
I'll let you seek out your need, to be held close
So tell me babe do you believe in fate
Cause' I have a tendency to eat whatever falls onto my plate

Oh-oh-oh-oh why do we trade our love for freedom
Oh, why do we trade our freedom for safe paradigm
Why do we come together, just to fall apart
Out tired arguments become works of art
I should have listened when they warned us
I should have listened when they warned us
I should have listened when they warned us
By setting off the fire alarm
