

Killers For The Cure

Once Human

We come to the killers for the cure

Slow

Cold blade, it runs

Down the center of your spine, pleading hunch

That you're running out of time, something's wrong

And your mouth's stitched up shut like waking up

With your head against the gun

Seems that the lead has got your tongue

Unspoken minds will speak with blood

If you want change, you got to change the source

We come to the killers for the cure

Only the dead have seen the end of war

For we come to the killers

Why do you expect to feed from the hungry?

A poor soul in debt will bleed

To get the rich blood flowing

Your sweat is to drain you out

Your fear is to drive you

On a path that grows from tears, no drought

Where blood is shed on bones

Imprisoned, it needs no locks, it needs no guards

It's not your vision, a hijacked mind won't see the bars

It's your decision to accept all things as they are

The hands of deliverance cannot take benighted hearts

You're not meant to understand

You just stand under

If you want change, you got to change the course

We come to the killers for the cure

Only the dead have seen the end of war

For we come to the killers

What would you say if you weren't afraid?

What would you say? What would you change?

What would it take?
