

Heat Death

Origin

Burdened with ecumenical constants
A cosmological graveyard silent
Oh gods how the stars did fall
Obscene the lie of constellations
Mislead by prophets, assured of a euphoric pantheon
A dark that doesn't matter to the indefinite roads of time

I am the crypt of my ancestors
Lineage determined to stagnate the rift in the sky

Empty, expanding forever
Untethered juggernaut of dynamic dissipation
A deity composed of all being
Aware of omnipotence
But lacking a conscience
That is not dead which can eternal lie
And with strange aeons even death may die

The symmetry erodes in perpetual decay, it's now in decline
Order and coherence lose distinction, dark matter spreads without end
Perpetual decay

Entropy, particles ripped away constantly
Energy, warped passages
At distances where time becomes obsolete, meaningless
Everything grinds to a halt
Intensity has started to dissipate quantum
Entanglements unravel
Atrophied spiral arms
Rapid exponential expansion has
Forever bedimmed the stars

Entropy, particles ripped away constantly
Energy, warped passages
At distances where time becomes obsolete, meaningless
Everything grinds to a halt
Intensity has started to dissipate quantum
Entanglements unravel
Atrophied spiral arms
Rapid exponential expansion has
Forever bedimmed the stars
Bedimmed the stars

All the hopes and dreams of every sentient thing
To crawl its way from the earliest primordial wake
Maintaining endless lines of progeny unbroken
Only to mire itself in an ultimate futility
The will to understand our surroundings
Has only telegraphed our eventual doom
All great works and achievements
These spiteful gods leave laughably moot

A response to the overture, dead center in the life abyss
Conclusive entropy, ubiquitous torment
Approaches absolutes, supplicant to the darkness
In every cosmological constant supermassive clusters implode
Oblivious to the rapture, beyond the heliopause nothing

Scales of time at factors unspeakable
Unbroken lines against every cosmic odds
Obsolete as if it never was Complete dark, everything

Entropy, particles ripped away constantly
Energy, warped passages
At distances where time becomes obsolete, meaningless
Everything grinds to a halt

The stars erupt, the sun explodes, dreams of a malignant god
All movement ceased, all actions nulled experiment comes to an end

Nothing yet to come
Nothing yet to come

Nothing can stop the tide
Of what is coming
Our fate is determined
The oncoming heat death