Karma Violins

Pale Forest

Sunken are the eyes of my creation into a glass containing smelly puss Whatever sense of gratitude I may have felt It went away too soon

He was your son, I was your daughter and the dream would last a million years Embraced by the song of a million weeping strings and all forgotten things

The wheel was my father's and mine was the stick

If you ask who made the castle crumble and who is left to blame
I guess my answer to your question will most surely be

He played his strings through me revealed my symphony

The wheel was my father's and mine was the stick