

Begin Again

Pamungkas

Today I saw two different women's eyes
One is shy
The other is on fire
One is brown
The other's full of life
They both are means to me

Today I saw two different women's eyes
One's so wise
The other's young and silly
But wisdom doesn't stop her for being very scared of death
And she told her, "Okay, he'll come around someday"

I have so much to think
I've got so much to feel inside
I've got so much questions
That no one seems to know
So tell me where I begin
I don't know where to begin
Begin again

Everybody knows it's not a fun thing
Everybody knows it's hard to grow up
In 10 years
Everything changes
Everyone I know
Some might gone
And some remains
Some forgotten
Some still have names
In 10 years

Everything changes
Everyone that stays
I'll tell them all about today
That things are good
It turns out okay

In the summer 21'
What could've been so fun
Lost its way somehow
Rearranging
In the summer 22'
Things are starting to
To begin again
I begin again

In the summer 21'
What could've been so fun
Lost its way somehow
Rearranging
In the summer 22'
Things are starting to
To begin again
I begin again