

Stumble into the Light

Parabelle

It's difficult to see the end
When you're walking with your worldly wisdom
There's a shape in your eye, it's a cold dead violet
We suffer the same but we suffer in silence
So it's difficult to see the end

You've arrived so bold
And you started such a commotion
I'd never say this but I hope you find
Another place to call your own
'Cause I had a choice
It ended in your debt
I made myself invincible
By making you invisible
This old brittle world
Can't take more, this means that

You had a choice that you blissfully ignored
You'll never break free from the walls that you built for me
Never break free, it's just the faults of what you're living for
And you beg me to stop, then beg for more
And you are never gonna find yourself again
Till you're on your own

You stumble into the light
Your silhouette on a brighter sky
You stumble into the light
It's gonna take many words to apologize
Your fake graceful stare
Empty thoughts 'cause there's nothing there
Your rage won't compare
You lost the plot and now no one cares

You had a choice that you blissfully ignored
You'll never break free from the walls that you built for me
Never break free, it's just the faults of what you're living for
And you beg me to stop, then beg for more
And you are never gonna find yourself again
Till you're on your own
Till you're on your own

You had a choice
You had a choice
You had a choice
You had a choice

You had a choice that you blissfully ignored
You'll never break free from the walls that you built for me
Never break free, it's just the faults of what you're living for
And you beg me to stop, then beg for more
And you are never gonna find yourself again
Till you're on your own
