

Oblivion

Peyton Parrish

The moon in the night shines bright like the sun
Ancient silhouettes burning like wood
Slowly we creep while the family sleep
The king was awake with cries

As the arrows fall
As the gates fall down
They will drown in fear
I will find you like a wolf in the night

Where are you?

Run, run, you can't hide
The enemy is hunting you tonight
Run, run, you can try
Escape the death that comes for you alive
It's only you and I
So stand your ground and fight
Run, run, time to die
Draw your blade, you demand oblivion

A double edged sword like the tongues we tell
Tales of a legend that the king once fell
The ravens flee and the darkness screams
The reign of the king has died

As the arrows fall
As the gates fall down
They will drown in fear
I will find you like a wolf in the night

Where are you?

Run, run, you can't hide
The enemy is hunting you tonight
Run, run, you can try
Escape the death that comes for you alive
It's only you and I
So stand your ground and fight
Run, run, time to die
Draw your blade, you demand oblivion

Run, run, time to die
Draw your blade, you demand oblivion