Scents and Subtle Sounds

If you would only stop to live One moment at a time You would I think, be startled by The things that you would find

Like scents you never noticed And many subtle sounds Like colors in the landscape And textures of the town

And the winds would lift you up Into the sky above And you'd be treated to a view Of everything you love

And if the moment passes You should try it once again For if you do it right you'll find The moment never ends
