

Miss You

Polly Scattergood

In my head treasure the things I've loved and lost
You climb upon my roof with the broken chimney pots
Above the world so bravely you said I was all you've got
From the seventeen floor it was a monumental drop

Yes you know I miss you
Guess I know you're gone

As painful as your tears fall they seem to fall a lot
I'm drowning in your sadness in this room that you forgot
You forgot to say you love me you were cold and unprepared
You forgot to say you're sorry, you were sad and you were scared
I was waiting for a phone call I was waiting for a sign
I was waiting for somebody to tell me that I was fine
As painful as your tears fall they seem to fall a lot
I'm drowning in your sadness in this room that you forgot

You will always be close light in the dark
Never far away, just a ache in my heart
Lost like a dream that you cannot rewind
Picking up the pieces of the fragments of your mind

Yes you know I miss you
Guess I know you're gone

As painful as the tears fall they seem to fall a lot
I'm drowning in your sadness in this room that you forgot
You forgot to say you love me you were cold and unprepared
You forgot to say you're sorry, you were sad and you were scared
I was waiting for a phone call I was waiting for a sign
I was waiting for somebody to tell me that I was fine
As painful as your tears fall they seem to fall a lot
I'm drowning in your sadness in this room that you forgot
