Dislocated Day

Porcupine Tree

A dislocated day
Peers in to the ether
Counts the stars inside the sky
And flies in to the never

Looped around my eyelids A thousand shining flecks Pale against the canvas Which hangs around my neck

Dislocated day
I will find a way
To make you say
The name of your forgiver

Stood beside an inlet A starfish leads a dance It dreams it is a human And falls into a trance

A hole inside my body Is wired up to a charge Chemical imbalance Tells me who you are

Insects hide the silence November brings deep rain Between the flow to freezing And yesterday's sustain
