

before you

PRETTYMUCH

Before you...

Tell me do you ever think about it
Are we living on two different timelines
I only jumped without a parachute
Cause I thought that you'd be my lifeline

We were looking up now we're sideways
On brain like migraine
Pain always felt like me or the highway
Shame

Cause you gave me purpose to my name
On surface games
Being played
Why

You always thinking about you
I'm always thinking about me
But I know that the truth is

I can't remember who I was before you
It's like looking for the answer
It's like asking will the sun come down
When I look into the mirror
I can't remember who I was before you
We won't ever get closure
And we might never get to work this out
But when I look into the mirror
I can't remember who I was before you

Before you I never gave a shit about it
Only thinking me myself and my time
Promised you forever got it tattooed too
Thoughts that keep me up until the daylight

We were looking up now we're sideways
On brain like migraine
Pain always felt like me or the highway
Shame
Cause you gave me purpose to my name
On the surface game
Being played

You always thinking about you
I'm always thinking about me
But I know that the truth is

I can't remember who I was before you
It's like looking for the answer
Is like asking will the sun come down
When I look into the mirror
I can't remember who I was before you
We won't ever get closure
And we might never get to work this out
But when I look into the mirror

I can't remember who I was before you

Before you

I can't remember who I was before you

It's like looking for the answer

Is like asking will the sun come down

When I look into the mirror

I can't remember who I was before you
