

Hallways

PUP

It took me a while to let it sink in
The way that you never say what you're really thinking
It took me a while to find out I keep fighting the feeling
And once again, I've been lucid dreaming

Turn the TV on but the thoughts won't stop
So I'll rip out the cord but I just can't turn 'em off

The first night without you
I collapsed on the living room floor
What the hell am I gonna do if I can never see you anymore?
The first night without you
I collapsed on the floor
'Cause when one door closes
It might never open
There might be no other doors
There might be no other doors

I'm losing the will to keep dragging on
But I can't die yet 'cause who will look after the dog?
And when you finally let go
And you told me that you wished I didn't exist
But karma is rich, isn't it?

The first night without you
I collapsed on the living room floor
What the hell am I gonna do if I can never see you anymore?
The first night without you
I collapsed on the floor
'Cause when one door closes
It might never open
There might be no other doors
There might be no other doors

So, what the hell am I gonna do if I can never see you anymore?
Might never see you anymore
'Cause when one door closes
It might never open
There might be no other doors
There might be no other doors

I'm losing the will to keep dragging on
(There might be no other doors)
But who will look after the dog?
(There might be no other doors)
I'm losing the will to keep dragging on
But I can't die yet 'cause who will look after the dog?
(There might be no other)
