I always sing here; surely singing from now on
I wonder how you could love me all along, all along, like that

I wonder how you could love me all along, all along, like that
I wonder how you could love me all along, all along, like that

By the exact center of morning and night, I become frighteningly lonely
In the exact center of you and me, the sun interrupts

I always crouch down with you to run away from the light
And I reveal this feeling to you with the leaf of five sounds

Thereupon your overflowing thought, it streams and flows along your cheek
I wonder if I can love you gently, gently, like that

I wonder if I can love you gently, gently, like that
I wonder if I can love you gently, gently, like that

I wonder how you could love me all along, all along, like that
I wonder how you could love me all along, all along, like that

I always sing here; surely singing from now on
I wonder how you could love me all along, all along, like that
