I was standing at the doors of my last summer
A blue soul with a knife hanging from the neck

I stare at the world with my big eyes
From somewhere, transparent blue

I can hardly call myself a good friend
As I say goodbye to this "everyday life" too suddenly

Even if you didn't like me and rejected me
I was always laughing by your side

It was my greatest wish
And I actually met you somewhere far away
Looking for a flat snow where nobody stepped before

There are two blue solitudes in this silver pool
And I don't even know the ending of these overlapped lips

Even with a miracle, light is unattainable for us
And yet I think I'll look at you tonight

Small warriors rolling out of your just starting life
Change your whirling skirts into wings and live today as well

Each time I lived a good day I hid to laugh

Thanks for looking up at the stars, laughing
Sorry if I wasted your time

We didn't even do it once: to secretly
Run through the world under the moon

I won't get tired of the sky
That today as well is blue
Actually, the downpour saved me yesterday

Someone distant says: "even if clumsy, you exist"
Well, who should have taught me that since I was born?

In a blink of an eye of the universe, I fell in love

There are two blue heartbeats in this silver pool
And as the lips overlapped I slowly remembered

On the day I was born, I'm sure that you
Spilled out of my head, you piece of me

I started holding on this world's edge
But I let it go as it shook me off

Even with a miracle, light is unattainable for us

Even so, more than ever, this is us
