Let's talk about everyday things I don't get to hear these days
Enough about how long till the world ends, tell me what you ate last night

You live in the distance, job well done
Use not just head and right hand, but sometimes your hips

A cracking voice of an old man says "Young people nowadays!"
From centuries ago they've always been like that

What is normal? Where can you find it? Looking desperate and plausible
Hate to say but it's right there, it's the world you believe in

Out of the obvious six billions, 365 dates
I produce, look after and nurture
That one little piece

We want money, they say, never-ending economy
Recession, foreign exchange likely to fluctuate in harmony all around the world

With 3 x as much money to buy out this planet, still not satisfied
Hey aliens! Come collect that god damn money!

Can somebody speak out? That smiling face of yours
Was born from somebody's grief and blooms in somebody's desperation

Shoved away to the corner of the universe, this nameless party
No choice but to proclaim oneself as the weak ones

Out of the correct six billions, 365 wars
I protect, grow and check the right answer I only know

Out of the obvious six billions, of 365 dates
I produce, look after and nurture
That one little piece

Let's talk about everyday things I don't get to hear these days
Enough about how long till the world ends cause it's already ended
