

Sign of Heaven

Rage

I've been waiting for an invitation couldn't leave my selfmade reservation
I had locked the doors and threw the key away

There was nothing but my own reflection and the phone was silent, no connection
I was turning just in circles with no end

All that I had, it was gone, it was dead
But now my night is surrounded by light
This must be a sign of heaven, a sign of heaven
the nightmare's over

As the winter left the frozen places and the mirror smiled at lonely face The my leaves they started slowly reached out

Now your laughter echoes in the silence and your waters wash the dirt from my hands as we harvest all the fruits that come our way

All that I had, it was gone, it was dead
But now my night is surrounded by light
This must be a sign of heaven, a sign of heaven
the nightmare's over

I was turning just in circles with no end...
