

Love Grows

Ralph McTell

The first time you kiss a girl
You think nobody in the world
Has ever felt the way you do
And as your love just keeps on growing
You think no one has a way of knowing
The love you feel

There are those in love who sense the danger
Told of the arrival of some little stranger
They'll have to learn to know
They think they have all the love there is
To divide it by one they think that they'll get less

But love grows (Oh, love grows)
Hey love grows (Oh, love grows)
Love grows and grows and grows
Won't you watch your love grow

A little stranger makes your love grow stronger
You find your arms have got a little bit longer
To wrap around your family
What is it the more that you divide it
It just comes back multiplied

Love grows (Oh, love grows)
Hey love grows (Oh, love grows)
Hey, love grows and grows and grows
Won't you watch your love grow

Watching love, watching love
Watching love, watching love grow

Watching love, watching love
Watching love, watching love grow

Watching love grow is the best occupation
Living on through the next generation
Oh, I know I know I know
What is it, the more you give away
The more it seems to come your way

Love grows (Oh, love grows)
Love grows (Oh, love grows)
Hey, love grows and grows and grows
Won't you watch your love grow
