

I Will Overcome.

RAYE

I'll overcome (She will, she will, she will)
I'll overcome (Yes indeed, yes indeed, yes indeed she will)

There's a thin grey veil over her horizon
The wall between hope and despair
She exists behind it
She will overcome

Five hundred steps left to make it to the front door
My red high heels click, click
Four many too drinks
I feel my backbone
Threaten to greet the concrete below
I mean, who wants to be in Paris drunk and alone?
Where the phantom of a past love lingers in the cracks of the cobblestones
That I march on
And it haunts me and it taunts me
And su-su-su-suddenly in a reflection of a Chanel boutique window I can see the old me and I hate her

I feel syrup strands of blue moonlight
Pour through the clouds
To find me out like a spotlight
As if Heaven's watching down
To illustrate briefly the state of my mind
I have black cat-eye glasses
So I look chic as I cry

And it's funny, some people say I remind them of Amy
Some spit through their keyboards I'll never amount
And the evil in insults
The arrows from your tongue
Is the same devils you tortured her with anyhow
I

I'll overcome (She will, she will, she will)
I'll overcome (Yes indeed, yes indeed, yes indeed)

When this wicked world wants to whisper
You can not
You won't be
You will not
So, go home
And shut up
And go sleep

This is a song to remind me
Since I needed one
I will overcome

There's a thin grey veil over her horizon
The wall between hope and despair
She exists behind it
She will overcome

Yes. I will. Yes. I will. Yes, I will. Yes. I will Yeah, yeah, yeah, yeah. Yes. I will. Oh

Five hundred steps back and I was doing so well
So well
Whilst scrolling, I sighed
I'm so jealous of everyone online
Who is so much happier and content and complete
To feel better, I'll shall arrange a sad little feast
Where I will jump up and down on my bed in my grief
And I'll play Edith Piaf
And I'll dance and I'll eat
Chocolate cake and I'll have no regrets 'til I wake up and hate me now
I must know, anyhow
I will keep on

I'll overcome (She will, she will, she will)
I'll overcome (Yes indeed, yes indeed, yes indeed)

When this wicked world wants to whisper
You can not
You won't be
You will not
So, go home
And shut up
And go sleep

This is a song to remind me
Since I needed one

Five hundred steps left. Maybe I have lost count
My battery died
So, I'm not sure if I turn left or turn right
As my eyes gathered tears
It's as if it was staged
How the night skies above start to thunder and rain
Like a Hollywood movie with some sad exceptions
No lover to kiss or promised happy endings
I'll swing 'round this street lamp and I'll give you a story
You may say I look crazy but I won't even care

Aren't we all broken people just perfect how to hide it?
And life's guarantee's that we're all going to die

So am I going to live like this all of my life?
I'm not okay right now
But I'll get there somehow

I, I'll overcome
I, I'll overcome (She will)

When this wicked world wants to whisper
You can not
You won't be
You will not
So, go home
And shut up
And go sleep

This is my song to remind me
I needed one
I will overcome

There's a thin grey veil over her horizon
And it is the wall between hope and despair

She exists behind it
She will overcome
