

Composure

Real Friends

Losing balance as I weigh out my options
It's an everyday morning routine
Through every hazy memory
At any second you could recap the climax
Not as vivid as it used to be
Through every hazy memory

The walls were built so high, but couldn't keep their words out
The shelter they provide only houses self doubt

I'm reclaiming my composure
Lately I'll bend, smile, and pretend to be stable
Been avoiding conversation
But lately I'll bend, smile, and pretend to be stable

Life's unfolding like the plot of a movie
Not the version that everyone sees
My dreams laid out in front of me (my dreams laid out in front of me)
I've never told anyone, but the truth is I see
The shadow hanging over me

The walls were built so high, but couldn't keep their words out
The shelter they provide only houses self doubt

I'm reclaiming my composure
Lately I'll bend, smile, and pretend to be stable
Been avoiding conversation
But lately I'll bend, smile, and pretend to be stable

The walls were built so high, but couldn't keep their words out
The shelter they provide only houses self doubt

I'm reclaiming my composure
Lately I'll bend, smile, and pretend to be stable
Been avoiding conversation
But lately I'll bend, smile, and pretend to be stable