

A Joke with No Words

Red City Radio

I used to see a light shining like diamond in the darkest night
I don't see it, I don't see it, I don't see it, I don't see it
anymore
And I used to walk alone searching for a treasure under every s tone
I don't see it, I don't see it, I don't see it, I don't see it
anymore
I don't see it, I don't see it, I don't see it, I don't see it
anymore

I once believed in love, sending up wishes to the stars above
I don't see it, I don't see it, I don't see it, I don't see it
anymore
I used to hide my faith, there'd always be something to light m y way
I don't see it, I don't see it, I don't see it, I don't see it
anymore
I don't see it, I don't see it, I don't see it, I don't see it
anymore

And I don't need this anymore
My passion was a fire that consumed me to the core
And the breeze that comes up from the shore
I don't need it anymore, I don't need it anymore
I don't need it anymore, I don't need it anymore
And I risk to lose it all just to have a little bit more

I used to see a light shining like diamond in the darkest night
He used to seem so bright, brighter than explosions on the four th of July
I don't see it, I don't see it, see it anymore
I don't see it, I don't see it, I don't see it, I don't see it
anymore

And I don't need this anymore
My passion was a fire that consumed me to the core
And the breeze that comes up from the shore
I don't need it anymore, I don't need it anymore
I don't need it anymore, I don't need it anymore
And I risk to lose it all just to have a little bit more
And I risk to lose it all just to have a little bit more
