

Threads

Reese Lansangan

Somewhere inside, maybe
I'm still dancing in the corners of your head
And the alleys of your mind
Like a ghost of a moment
Passing through the threads of time

I'm still in love with the tiny dark circles
Around your hazel eyes
Whenever you're asleep
And if you are, are you dreaming
Of passing through the threads of time?

You've been going 'round and 'round in circles
In my head you roller coaster
And I'm waking up with a pillowhead
On the wrong side of the bed
I hope, baby girl, you don't forget about us

Memories fade
But I hold on to the thought of you
And I in my mind, slow dancing all the time
Won't you meet me in the middle
While we're passing through the threads of time

Wondering why you keep me up at night
And just the same, are you remembering me?
When the moon glows to silver
Are you passing through the threads of time?

You've been going 'round and 'round
In circles in my head you roller coaster
I've been waking up with my pillowhead
On the wrong side of the bed
I hope, baby girl, you don't forget about us

I've been going 'round and 'round
In circles with a chip on my shoulder
I've been going round
And I still haven't found
The thing I'm looking for
Do you think about ever going home
To my restless soul someday?
'Cause I left it at your door
I hope that you're reading my mind

Someday, will we meet again?
Only time can really tell; I wish you well; take good care
While we're passing through the threads of time
Won't you hold on just a little?
I will meet you in the middle
While we're passing through the threads of time
