

One More Day

Revis

Watching the sunlight fading
Sliding away like lighting violent space
So illuminated
Even angels had to watch
Now there's a song that's playing
Standing alone in a Greyhound Station
For a destination
That we have long forgot

Open your eyes here solace for thee
Lay down your arms so whatsoever it seems
Lift up your heart to the glory that was lost on me

Given one more day
Flying like years
Open and free to leave this feeling
Enough to replace all fear
Given one more day
Flying like years
All that you need to leave this feeling
Enough to replace all fear
Enough to replace all fear

I hear a sound like laughter
Taking me back to a time when it mattered
And everything after
Is the part that I forgot
Another day is dying
Sliding away and now night is upon me
So desperately wanting
For the things that can't be bought

Open your eyes here solace for thee
Lay down your arms so whatsoever it seems
Lift up your heart to the glory that was lost on me

Given one more day
Flying like years
Open and free to leave this feeling
Enough to replace all fear
Given one more day
Flying like years
All that you need to leave this feeling
Enough to replace all fear
Enough to replace all fear

Enough to replace all fear
(Love the feeling like I'm coming back from a blackhole)
Enough to replace all fear
(Find you standing in an empty field with weed to hold)
Enough to replace all fear
(And all your worries like a heavy weight that you have to hold)
(Simply by letting go)

Given one more day

Open and free to leave this feeling
Given one more day
Flying like years
All that you need to leave this feeling
