

Seven Years Gone

Richie Sambora

Another change of season slipping through my life I can't recall believing that I'd make it here alive

Steady wind is blowing the clouds don't look the same
You can't deny the thunder when you're living through the rain

Like a moth dances with the light
Sometimes a shadow burns too bright
Shattered silence in the night
You wake up, move on
The seven years gone
Seven years gone

Hung up, cold and reeling
Wounded deep inside Can't find a road to healing when you're blinded by your pride

The hourglass is broken Sand is slipping through your hands While you're chasing what's been stolen changes making, making other plans

Like a moth dances with the light
Sometimes a shadow burns too bright
Shattered silence in the night
You wake up, move on Time's a train travellin' way too fast
tearing moments from the past
While today's singing yesterday's song
You grow up, move on The seven years gone

(solo)

Time, time,
time, time ticking,
time, time ticking away That's life
it's all about living taking it day by day Flying blind, leave it behind Singing a different song
One day, you're waking up You're seven years
Seven years gone

You're growing up, holding on
The seven years gone

Seven years gone
Seven years gone
