Six Ways 'Til Sunday

Rise Against

The years unfold in one moment Voices that we heard so loud Are now suddenly silenced inside this crowd

You're surrounded by the lives
Of those who found something to hold
So bringing everybody down is all you know

You've been hiding so long, you can't find yourself In this sheltered life you live When everything you want is at your fingertips You'll never know what need is

Claiming to be something different So wanting to believe that you're better than the rest To make up for your self esteem

You talk to hear your own voice and You've left me no choice but to choose I miss the person that you were but I don't miss you

You've been hiding so long, you can't find yourself In this sheltered life you live When everything you want is at your fingertips You'll never know what need is

You're the new revolution
The angst filled adolescent
You fit the stereotype well

1, 2, 3, go

You're the new revolution The angst filled adolescent You fit the stereotype well

You're the new revolution The angst filled adolescent You fit the stereotype well

You're the new revolution
You fit the stereotype well
