Don't say a goodbye

Since you left, I finally feel alive
Every night, I write letters to my past self With just a glass of whiskey, all the memories come pouring out, praying to a god I don't even believe in
So that you can move on from being my everything in your twenties
I'll sincerely wish for your happiness, even though you probably won't believe me
It was a tough relationship, there's a stigma on my chest
It's called you, I can't even believe we were together
It was a flu, and we could see the karma coming through
The monster hasn't been me, I beg you, oh, baby, please Forever, ever, ever wish you a true happiness, damn
