ROAM

I woke and walked the streets of my home
To breathe the air that I used to know
We thought the world would just fall at our feet
So careless in youth. Is this the place that I've grown to be?

Taller than I was, my heart with broken valves and battle scars
A little worse for wear at the seams
I've fallen down a hundred times, a hundred more await in line
To take a piece of me

All I know is days have come and gone
And I still belong, still belong
With the wind I go, return again when I get in
I still feel home, still feel home

Home, whoa

Longer nights held better stories
Ignore all words of warning
Threw caution to the wind
As the wind threw me aside
It told me, heed my words of warning
Through better days and storms
I'll be here to put you down
And I'll do it as I decide

All I know is days have come and gone
And I still belong, still belong
With the wind I go, return again when I get in
I still feel home, still feel home

All I know is days have come and gone
And I still belong, still belong

All I know is days have come and gone
And I still belong, still belong
With the wind I go, return again when I get in
I still feel home, still feel home

Home, whoa
