

Another Time, Another Place

Robin Trower

Dry your eyes, wipe away your tears, my precious one
Everyday, some way, some where we'll fall
The world must turn, that's why we try to keep movin' on It's always been that way, that's all

Now, I'm not sayin' you won't find somethin' to believe in Even the search can define the truth
But first time impressions can be so deceivin'
When somethin' does your heart, you just turn it loose

And we will meet another time
The sun on our face
And we will meet another time
Another time, another place

There will be days when you just want to give it up
But things don't always have to go our way
So take a drink, when they pass you the cup
The bitter can taste so sweet, another day

And we will meet another time
The sun upon our face
And we will meet another time
Another time, another place

So dry your eyes, wipe away your tears, my precious one
And watch as the years go spinnin' by
The moments are lost when you hear the siren song
The spell will break when you hear your first one cry

And we will meet another time
The sun upon our face
And we will meet another time
Another time, another place
