Roger Hodgson

Why did you leave me all alone why didn't you tell me you were going home Everything changes now you're gone making me wonder how to carry on Over and over you gave to me I wish I had told you what you meant to me Why does it always have to end losing a loved one is so hard

Oh my Lord, is it right?
By the light of the darkest night
You're never gonna see you're never gonna see me crying
Where's the warmth of the sun?
Was there something that I should have done?
You're never gonna see
you're never gonna see me crying

What I would give just to hear you laugh but all I have left is just a photograph Oh to have known you all those years wish I had known how to dry your tears Everything matters when you're young everything shatters when the day is done Everything falters in the end losing a loved one is so hard...

Oh my Lord, is it right?
By the light of the darkest night
You're never gonna see
you're never gonna see me crying
Where's the warmth of the sun?
Was there something that I should have done?
You're never gonna see
you're never gonna see me crying

So many feelings rushing in it's too late for thinking how it could have been Who knows the reason was meant to be, it's gonna be lonely Will you wait for me...?
