

Brothers, Strangers and Friends

Ronnie Milsap

With her long auburn hair and her baby blue eyes
She tears down the strongest of men
The curves of her body have tempted the passions
Of my brothers, strangers and friends.

But my baby's in love with living for me
And she lets them know where they stand
I know she'd be angry, if she knew the feelings
Of my brothers, strangers and friends.

She's been kissed, she's been loved
She's been touched by them all but not by their lips or their hands
While they burn with envy I almost feel sorry
For my brothers, strangers and friends.

But my baby's in love with living for me
And she lets them know where they stand
I know she'd be angry if she knew the feelings
Of my brothers, strangers and friends.

I know she's be angry if she knew the feelings
Of my brothers, strangers and friends...
