

You Started Something

Rosemary Clooney

You were just passing by, but you started something
I may never know why, but you started something
With your glance a new romance was in the making
Just like the sun starts the flowers to waking
I knew all about love, I said this can't happen
But then you came along and caught my heart napping
Now each hour and each new day will always be spring
'Cause you really started something.

I knew all about love, I said this can't happen
But then you came along and caught my heart napping
Now each hour and each new day will always be spring
'Cause you really started something.
