

Not Believe

Ross Copperman

I messed up enough to know
The definition of a broken road
I sunk so low, I know how deep the pain can go

It's easy to lose the faith
When it all don't go your way
Feel your own heart breaking
Find yourself in a place

Where it's hard to trust
There's really something out there bigger than us

But how can I feel the weight of the love in your kiss
The way your touch makes me whole, oh all over again
How can I hurt so long, finally come up to breathe
And see the best part of my life standing right in front of me
And not believe
And not believe

Every scar every consequence
Finally you made it all make sense
Kissing you it feels like grace
Love me like I never made a mistake

God knows that I don't deserve it
But you make me feel like I'm worth it

How can I feel the weight of the love in your kiss
The way your touch makes me whole, oh all over again
How can I hurt so long, finally come up to breathe
And see the best part of my life standing right in front of me
And not believe
And not believe

It's hard to trust
There's really something out there bigger than us

How can I feel the weight of the love in your kiss
The way your touch makes me whole, oh all over again
How can I hurt so long, finally come up to breathe
And see the best part of my life standing right in front of me
And not believe
And not believe