

Somewhere

Run River North

Somewhere, I hear the voice for the words written to my heart
To get there, mountain or valley I will walk through the night and dark

No one, nobody teaches you to walk with open hands
It's the lonesome, always bound holding stone and crumbling sand

What was between our hands was lost

I hear no voice to follow

Calling out your name above

Took all that was left of me

Threw it back into the sea

Behind me, I know the old have gone to the one I see

Beside you, set apart and fall past the gold-less tree

No one, nobody teaches you to walk with open hands

It's the lonesome, always bound holding stone and crumbling sand

What was between our hands was lost

I hear no voice to follow

Calling out your name above

Took all that was left of me

Threw it back into the sea

To find you ooohh x4

Oceans breath out

Carry me in

I saw the stars by the tide and the cliff

You came alive as I was all but gone, all but gone

Somewhere, I hear the voice for the words written to my heart

What was between our hands was lost

I hear no voice to follow

Calling out your name above

Took all that was left of me

Threw it back into the sea

To find you ooohh x4
