

Drives

Russ

She finds some shake and resin
And she puts it in a bowl
And she plugs in her heated blanket
And wonders why he acts so cold
And now she's lonely and it's late
And plus, her mom lives out of state
And now she starts to cry again
She doesn't know if she can take another

Cold night sitting, crying on the bathroom floor
Wondering why she wants to do this anymore
They do a lot of traveling, her bags are already packed
So she hops inside her fancy car, he bought a while back

And she just drives
No clue where she is going
She's just tired of not knowing
So she drives
She's going over lines
That she's gonna tell him when it's time
Till then, she drives, drives, drives
Until that moment comes, she just drives

Resentment has her retracting
And everyday she's reenacting
The past and trauma that he caused
Lying in the bed made out of gauze
She tried to use to heal the wounds
But they just went and bled on through
He told her that he needs some space
But she just loves him to the moon

And now she's waiting in his driveway looking at the door
Hoping he comes out and tells her she ain't gonna hurt no more
But he can't give her love until he learns to love him first
She knows that he's in therapy, she's hoping that it works

Till then, she just drives
No clue where she is going
She's just tired of not knowing
So she drives
She's going over lines
That she's gonna tell him when it's time
Till then, she drives, drives, drives
Until that moment comes, she just drives, drives, drives
Until that moment comes, she just drives
Until that moment comes, she just drives
