

World War 3

Ruth B.

Cold afternoon, I had no idea who you were
So casually you walked into my universe
You said, "Hey, you got some pretty brown eyes."
And I couldn't, couldn't help but smile
And I think that's the moment it all happened
"Wouldn't you say so, Captain?"

But love turned into games
And games turned into heartbreak
And heartbreak turned into war
And if I'm correct you used to tell me,
"Darling, all is fair in love and war."

You, you meant the world to me
Then you went World War Three
You, you love so mercilessly
And left me out to bleed
Guns out, let's go,
I'll be your fighter if you say so
Shots fired, I see
The battlefield is filled with fatality

I don't get why we're meant to fall in love, then say goodbye
Gave you all my heart and all my precious time
And I can picture you in your blue jeans
Looking right at me with that gorgeous smile
I couldn't see the lies and the things that you would hide

You, you meant the world to me
Then you went World War Three
You, you love so mercilessly
And left me out to bleed
Guns out, let's go,
I'll be your fighter if you say so
Shots fired, I see
The battlefield is filled with fatality

So here's to you, here's to us
Here's to everything we ever were
And here's to a new World War

I can see the headlights now
He tore her apart
But I got the greatest weapon of all
A broken heart

You, you meant the world to me
Then you went World War Three
You, you love so mercilessly
And left me out to bleed
Guns out, let's go,
I'll be your fighter if you say so
Shots fired, I see
The battlefield is filled with fatality

So here's to you, here's to us
Here's to everything we ever were

And here's to a new World War
