When Mother Nature puts her foot down
You can be sure we'll all know about it
For the true power of the elements will be more
Than anyone bargained for

Think of... the biggest thunderstorm you have ever known
Think of... the darkest depths of the sea alone
Think of... ten foot snow drifts and the havoc they cause
Think of... Planet Earth and dare to call it yours

Nature can be such a comfort,
But we have all seen the other side
The cruelty of the cold, the desolation of the too hot sun
Diseases are there for all mankind, just waiting
Biding time, they'll come and get us in the night
Like a monster to a frightened child

Think of... the biggest thunderstorm you have ever known
Think of... the darkest depths of the sea alone
Think of... ten foot snow drifts and the havoc they cause
Think of... Planet Earth and dare to call it yours
