

Funeral

Sarah Cothran

I lay a rose
Light a couple of candles
They wear black clothes
Everyone I used to know
Everything's changed, everything's changed since you

I stand alone
By my double in the ground
I bow my head in silence
Commemorate the younger me
And everything's changed, everything's changed since you

Now and then I stand and watch
At my own funeral
I don't recognize myself anymore
Since I met you I'm not
Who I was before that
I don't know if thats good or bad

Mother says nice words
And my sister does as well
These picture frames all hold
Different versions, different worlds
Now the worlds changed, yes the worlds changed since you

And now and then I stand and watch
At my own funeral
I don't recognize myself anymore
Since I met you I'm not
Who I was before that
I don't know if thats good or bad

I don't wanna let her go
No, guess I'm gonna let her go

Now and then I stand and watch
At my own funeral
I don't recognize myself anymore
Since I met you I'm not
Who I was before that
I don't know if thats good or bad
