Self Against City

It's 3AM and you are on the floor again Running out of steam but you say you're just trying to think An emotional vampire caught redhanded Sucking the blood from all your chances Save your breath for breathing Just put it behind you And fight the fights worth winning But be ready when they find you Don't think you're something that you're not All you needed was someone to show you all you could be Someone who would push you through the door Turn the lock, break off the key So his fragile footsteps walk away Now that you found the remedy Save your breath for breathing Just put it behind you And fight the fights worth winning But be ready when they find you Don't think you're something that you're not Don't think you're something that you're not Save your breath for breathing Just put it behind you And fight the fights worth winning But be ready when they find you Don't think you're something that you're not Don't think you're something that you're not