

Train Catcher

Seth Sentry

So I'm a go catch that train
I hope to God I never see you again
But maybe we should play a quick game of your fault

Been thinkin' a lot about the shit that we gotten our selves into
And what I'm about to do I do it for me
Really not out to prove I ain't a selfish dude I am
You knew the truth in advance and took the chance
The minute we shook them hands you booked it
And looking back
That scale of goods and bad
Was on a crooked slant
But romance don't come with a booklet
You called me immature, well I was immature like this before
The difference is you didn't admit that it pissed you off
That's if it did at all
But if you bit your tongue and thought that you could change me
Then baby you may be misinformed
No man should change to suit a girl
'Cause if they do they runnin' the risk becoming a distant stranger to thems elves
I got a train to catch so farewell
I hope you fare well
Nah I don't blame you that ain't fair, well

So I'm a go catch that train
I hope to God I never see you again
But maybe we should play a quick game of your fault
And we can stand a pace away but face to face
So we both can see the moment that the stone breaks
And maybe we should trade some insults

This train's late it's typical wait
Stay a little more hey
Say the things you couldn't say but maybe wish you could
'Kay I should've listened more, I made you miserable Lately I played invisible maybe I didn't miss those calls
I know I put you second to rappin' and bricked the wall up
Something just happened and snap I had to risk it all
But you didn't need a crystal ball to figure that this was all I had My passion for music was bigger than this if it hits a sore point
It's alright of course I, know, of course I know
This ain't exactly breaking news I made you play the background
Look I'm sorry, honest indian
I swear on the friendship that we would've had if I wasn't a dip shit
And if you weren't a monstrous, naggin' horrible bitch who wants the attention on
So bad that she'll sabotage a man who loves her just to get it
You're fucking insane
And I don't mean that in a good way bye bye

So I'm a go catch that train
I hope to God I never see you again
But maybe we should play a quick game of your fault
And we can stand a pace away but face to face
So we both can see the moment that the stone breaks
And maybe we should trade some insults