

Without You

Shamir

I've lost my mind, many times
And I'll do it again, a break from this reality
To remind myself not to play pretend and I don't wanna live forever and I thank the stars I won't
But as we multiply, our bodies die, but all the damage carries on

The bees just might be gone forever
And the forest can't be saved
Without you
Without you
The waters rise from the heated seas
But I can't help but wonder what they could be
Without you
Without you

You seem serene, yet obscene in your indifference
The last time I saw Longhorn sheep was the the last time I felt obliv ion
And I don't want to keep preaching, but I'll say it since you won't
While you're preoccupied with your silly life on our overcrowded home

The bees just might be gone forever
And the forest can't be saved
Without you
Without you
The waters rise from the heated seas
But I can't help but wonder what they could be
Without you
Without you

It's high time and the stakes are getting higher
And you can have what you desire and lose it all
Don't you miss the breeze without the overbearing heat?
While all the deserts getting covered in snowfall

The bees just might be gone forever
And the forest can't be saved
Without you
Without you
The waters rise from the heated seas
But I can't help but wonder what they could be
Without you

Without you, oh, oh, oh, oh
Without you
Without you, oh, oh
