

Begin Again

Shinedown

Welcome friends to seconds lost
And starts that won't begin
To twisted eyes that see inside
Rules that always bend

A simple task, a see-through mask
That questions where and why
We shared our skin to occupy
And keep our piece of mind

Bring only what you need to survive

They burn an image from lines on my face
They stole it from the pages that kept my place
I stand on the outside, would die to get in
I crawl inside just to begin again

It's so unfair, this broken smile
That keeps us all aware
Of wishful thoughts and scenes we lost
And times we'll never share

I'll ask you now to show me how
To fill the circle in
What tells us all, there is no fall
And the story never ends

Bring only what you need to survive

They burn an image from lines on my face
They stole it from the pages that kept my place
I stand on the outside, would die to get in
I crawl inside just to begin again

They never, they never cared
I wished you'd understand, I'm already dead
What would you be, why would you die?
How would you lie?

Take something from me
(They burn an image)
They took it from me
...
(They burn an image)
They took it from me
(Image, image)

They burn an image from lines on my face
They stole it from the pages that kept my place
I stand on the outside, would die to get in
I crawl inside just to begin again

They burn an image from lines on my face
They stole it from the pages that kept my place
I stand on the outside and died to get in
I crawl inside just to begin again
