

Simulation

Showtek

Do you think we're living in a simulation?

It doesn't matter

Why?

Let's say we are living in a simulation, so what?

If we're all just bits of data floating through some cable some where

That doesn't make what we're experiencing right now any less real to us

If you're playing The Sims your Sims only know what they can experience

So why bother fixating on the uncontrollable, the unknowable

Where something that if everything were to shut off tomorrow, what would change?

If we found out we were in a simulation, what would change?

Would everything not matter?

But you have all these experiences

You have all these emotions

You felt things

So it doesn't really matter if we're simulated or not

Do you think we're living in a simulation?

If we're all just bits of data floating through some cable some where

That doesn't make what we're experiencing right now any less real to us

If you're playing The Sims your Sims only know what they can experience

So why bother fixating on the uncontrollable, the unknowable

Where something that if everything were to shut off tomorrow, what would change?

If we found out we were in a simulation, what would change?

Would everything not matter?

But you have all these experiences

You have all these emotions

You felt things

So it doesn't really matter if we're simulated or not

Do you think we're living in a simulation?