

First Mother (Lilith)

Silent Planet

Awake, awake your eyes - or forever fallen
Sister, can you see me through the boundaries of this garden?
When every man will take your voice
Every God will fate your end
You planted paradox in the center of our humanity;
My ambivalent proclivity for insufficiency
Should I sleep or should I die alone?
Life to death or flesh to decompose
You captured me
I'm awakened by a fate that screams:
"You will bear the weight to give this world a beating heart th at never ends."
Now bring me a love that will live and die by my every word I s peak
Won't you lie in this bed that we have made?
I must become something more than this
Should I sleep or should I die alone?
Life to death or flesh to decompose
You've captured me
Should I sleep or should I die alone?
Life to death or flesh to decompose
You've captured me
